

I believe Sinclair's decision to force its stations to give free air time to "Stolen Honor" is in violation of FCC guidelines. It is not news coverage and should be fall under the definition of paid for political programing. I also believe it is illegal to air it because it call be legally construed as a political advertisement for the Bush campaign. Sinclair uses the public's airwaves for free on the condition that it serves the publics interest and adheres to the guidelines of the FCC. This action does neither. It is an ethical violation of the basic principles of fairness on which our democarcy was founded. It would set a dangerous precedent. In fairness they should air a pro Kerry documentary like "Going Upriver" in the same program but none of this should be done on the publics dime.
